

The United Nations health and well-being goal

Health and well-being is the of the 17 goals and aims to ensure healthy life and well-being for all people at all The overall goal is to a wide range of and address various continuous and health issues.
 Specific include’s health, and the spread of HIV and Locally, major strides have already been made such as life access to water and as well as reducing child and maternal mortality and diseases like, tuberculosis, polio, HIV and AIDS. But there’s still much to Let’s put things in to better the global Since fewer children die each day but more than 6 million still don’t get to celebrate their birthday. mortality has fallen by almost 50 percent since 1990 but the maternal maternity ratio in regions is still 14 times higher than in developed regions. the incidence of diseases has overall since many are still by HIV and AIDS. HIV is the cause of death for of reproductive age In 2013, 35 million people were living with HIV. So now we understand what’s going on what are some of the goals for this you ask? Some target goals

- the maternal mortality ratio to less than 70 per live births
- preventable infant and child deaths under five years old
- reducing the neonatal and child rate in all countries
- ending the of AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and neglected tropical diseases
- combating hepatitis and other diseases
-and treating mental health diseases
- ensuring universal access to sexual and reproductive services
- achieving universal health coverage and health financing and the research and development of vaccines and medicine.

To learn more about the health and well-being goals and what you can do to help, visit un.org/sustainabledevelopment/health.

