How the Internet Has Changed Everyday Life

What Happened?

The Internet has turned our existence upside down. It has revolutionized communications, that it is now our preferred of everyday communication. In almost everything we do, we use the Internet. a pizza, buying a television, a moment with a friend, a picture over instant messaging. the Internet, if you wanted to with the news, you had to walk down to the when it opened in the morning and buy a local edition what had happened the previous day. today a click or two is enough to read your local paper and any news source from anywhere in the world, up to the minute.

The Internet itself has been transformed. In its early days— from a historical perspective are still relatively recent—it was a static network designed to shuttle a small freight of bytes or a short between two terminals; it was a repository of where content was and maintained only by expert coders. Today, , immense quantities of information are uploaded and downloaded over this electronic leviathan, and the content is very much our own, we are all commentators, publishers, and creators.

LIVEWORKSHEETS