Interdisciplinary Unit: The Africans

The African people came to The Bahamas from Africa. They did not want to come. Cruel people took them away from their homes forcefully. Their hands and ankles were chained. They were put in ships. Many Africans died on the long journey to our islands. When the Africans arrived, they were auctioned off, or sold at Vendue House in New Providence. The slaves were made to work on large farms called plantations. The Africans had to do all the hard work. If they refused, they were beaten or killed. They had to work all day, and they were never paid.

They settled in Congo Town in Andros or Congo Town in Fox Hill. These towns were renamed after the Congo regions in West Africa. This is one way the slaves remembered where they came from.

Many of the slaves came from West and Central Africa. They brought with them many traditions.

One thing was their way of preparing food. From Nigeria, they brought dodo which is fried plantains. From Gambia they brought superkanj which is okra soup.

Dodo or fried plantains

Superkanj or Okra Soup

Another tradition was the Asue which is a way of saving money.

Our Junkanoo is also something the Africans brought with them. This is a WesT African tradition. The costumes and musical instruments used in Junkanoo are similar to those used in celebrations in West Africa.

After many years, people from many different countries realized that slavery was wrong. These people were called abolitionists. The slaves won their freedom in 1834. It was called emancipation. We remember this day the first Monday in August every year.
