READING: Read this article and do tasks A and B	5 x 0.2 = 1 mark

The Indian-Pacific left Sydney and headed westward. Thirty years had passed since I last took the train across this island continent to Perth in Western Australia. In those primitive days, the journey was a bone-shaking, sleepless test of energy and patience. Looking around my spacious, luxurious cabin, I happily thought that this trip would be a welcome improvement on its awful predecessor.

The Indian-Pacific is like a miniature city on wheels and relies on little outside assistance as it makes its huge journey across an ancient and mysterious land. Approaching the foothills of the Blue Mountains, I began to explore this long city that would be my home for the next 65 hours.

The scenery was spectacular as the Indian-Pacific climbed its way through the Blue Mountains. The mountains are so named because of the blue haze caused by the eucalyptus trees. This uniquely Australian phenomenon inspired my imagination.

That night I slept without interruption for six splendid hours. Waking refreshed, I drew the blind and saw a different world. A vast, empty panorama raced past my window. This was the Australian outback: red sandy plains, low vegetation and few trees.

We had travelled almost 1,000 km from Sydney on our way to the first stop, the 'Silver City' of Broken Hill. The mines of Broken Hill produce about two million tons of zinc and silver per year.

By mid-afternoon, we were passing through wide, waving fields as the great train drew closer to Adelaide, the capital city of South Australia. The engines are changed in Adelaide so there is a two-hour stop, during which a tour of the city is arranged for those who want to take a closer look at this elegant town.

Task A Underline the parts of the article that tell us the following things. There is one extra sentence.

1 It would be better than the previous one.

2 It was hard to find.

3 Does not need much external help.

4 The view was wonderful.

Task B Circle T for true and F for false. Correct the false statement/s on the blank lines below.

4 The train only stops to change engines. | T | F |

_____

5 Passengers willing to visit Adelaide can do so. | T | F |

_____
