1) Couple celebrate with 50-year-old chicken

A Manchester couple celebrated 50 years of marriage by eating a tin of chicken they were given on their wedding day. They had kept it as a memory of their big day in 1971. They had promised each other to eat it on their golden wedding anniversary. When the big day came, they opened the tin – and found the chicken was still good. A food expert said, “Tinned food can last forever and this tin had obviously been closed properly.”

2) Cat party

A village in China organised a fish party for more than 200 cats. The villagers had bought the cats to control the rats on their land. The move was a great success and the villagers decided to reward the cats for their good work.

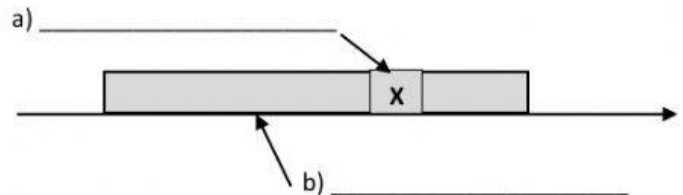

3) Dog on runway

Two passengers stopped a packed Boeing 767 just before take-off. Terry and Susan Smith were sitting on the plane when they saw their spaniel, Poppy, chased by airport security staff. They shouted for the pilot to stop the plane and rushed out to help catch their pet. They had put Poppy in a cage on the cargo deck but she somehow escaped as the plane was going to the runway. Even with the help of the owners, it took more than ten minutes to catch the terrified dog.
