Joanna first started to think carefully about recycling when she saw a science programme on TV. A scientist on the programme was talking about how many plastic carrier bags and bottles we all use, and how important it is to recycle all our waste. Joanna immediately decided she wanted to do something to help. So she spoke to her teachers at school. All the teachers and students decided to start a big recycling project in all the classes to recycle all their waste. For example, everything from school lunchboxes was collected: plastic drinks bottles, aluminium cans and cardboard juice cartons. A lot of waste from school meals was composted, too, and was used to grow vegetables. It all happened very quickly, so Joanna and her teachers were very surprised and pleased! Joanna has been asked to write an article for the online school magazine next month; of course, she's said 'Yes'!
