The best festival

The town of Perugia is in a quiet part of Italy called Umbria. It is 160 kilometres north of the capital, Rome. This city is famous for its grapes. Every autumn, thousands of people travel to Perugia, but they don't go to the town to eat grapes – they travel miles for the chocolate.

People from Perugia celebrate a festival called Eurochocolate. It's an old festival first celebrated in 1933 and it's also a long festival; it lasts nine days every October. It's a very important celebration of chocolate so Italians close the streets in the old town for the visitors: 900,000 people from around the world!

There are hundreds of special shops in the streets. Local people make chocolate sweets and also cook with chocolate in front of the visitors. Families can buy souvenirs in chocolate, chocolate money and chocolate animals for their children. Other activities include art displays, experimental chocolate tastings and street performances.

Everyone loves Christmas and Carnival time but from all the festivals Eurochocolate is definitely the best.
