Cindy's Blended Family

Cindy had a very happy family where she lived with her parents in a quaint cottage. Life was great as a traditional family as she had very doting parents who loved her immensely. However, her life changed when her father passed away due to colon cancer. Cindy was distraught as it was the end of the world for her. However, her mother was a strong shoulder for her to lean on. With her mother's support, she accepted her father's untimely demise and looked forward to a single-parent family.

Life was blissful with her mother as both mother and daughter got on well together. She worked hard at school while her mother kept her nose to the grindstone. They would have their dinner together and spend the night watching movies and eating popcorn. The weekends would be spent going to the movies or shopping or simply having a lazy day at home. The bottom line was they were happy together. Cindy was contented with life and did not wish for anything more.

However, a year later, things began to change as her mother would come home late very day on the pretext of working late. Cindy began to fend for herself as she would make her own meals and watch television on her own. She began to miss the good times she had with her mother. One Saturday, Cindy's mother told her that she had to work on a project, and she would be home very late. Cindy decided to meet up with her friends to watch Trolls World Tour, the latest Universal Pictures' animated film. After having a scrumptious dinner at Pizza Hut, the girls went to see a film. They took their seats near the entrance, chatting merrily as they wolfed down the caramel popcorn and washed them down with chilled Pepsi.

Just then, Cindy saw a silhouette of a very familiar woman. She peered intently and she had goosebumps. It was her mother! She was with a man whom Cindy had never met. Her popcorn seemed to have choked her! Warm, bitter tears rolled down her cheeks as she saw her mother has been lying to her for almost a year! She was not working late but she had a new love interest! Cindy was annoyed with herself for being so gullible! While her friends were laughing at the antics of the characters, Cindy was watching her mother and the man intently with tears flowing freely from her eyes. She could not believe that her mother would lie to her.

After the show, Cindy went home and called her grandparents who lived in the same town. In between sobs, she narrated the incidents. Her grandparents, two aunts, an uncle and a few cousins were in her house within twenty minutes. Cindy hugged them and cried. She was glad that she had the support of her extended family. Her grandmother consoled her and spoke gently to her. She reminded Cindy that everyone deserved happiness, including her mother. Cindy sat quietly and pondered about what her grandmother said. She realised she was selfish. She looked at her extended family who were chatting happily and she went to join them.

At midnight, her mother came. She was puzzled to see her relatives at home. She ran and hugged Cindy, asking her if she was okay. Both mother and daughter hugged each other and cried. When they were calmer, Cindy told her mother that she saw her mother with a man at the cinema. Her mother was shocked. She told Cindy that the man was her colleague, Jamie, and that she loved him and wanted to marry him. Cindy nodded her head and said that she wanted her mother to be happy. That night, her relatives spent the night at her home.

The next day, her mother invited Jamie and his daughter for lunch. Cindy was introduced to Jamie and his daughter, Karen, who was three years younger to her. They ate and chat. Cindy realised her mother was happy. She had never seen her mother this happy ever since her father died. She wanted her mother to be happy. She liked Karen, too. Karen is a cheerful girl and soon the girls got on well. Cindy learnt that Karen is not Jamie's biological daughter. She adopted her from an orphanage when she was a baby. Cindy realised that Jamie is a kind man and would make them all happy.

Later in the evening, Cindy's mother and Jamie announced that they would be getting married soon. Cindy would now have a blended family where she would live with her stepfather and stepsister. She was glad that everything turned out well.
