Personal Narrative Writing

Explore Setting

Setting is the time and place (or when and where) of the story specific descriptions of places in your story can help your readers better understand your experiences.

Sensory details make the settings unique, interesting, and memorable.

Read each of the following sensory details description. Then, write to which of the five senses it belongs. Sight, smell, sound, taste and touch

The car squeaked every time I hit a bump in the road.

The tiny red ant climbed up the broken twig.

One bite of the sour lemon caused my lips to pucker.

The sharp edge of the paper cut my finger and made it sting.

The sweet smell of freshly baked apple filled the air.
