The Elephant Man

We gave Merrick two rooms at the back of the hospital. One room was a bathroom, so he could have a bath every day. Soon his skin was much better, and there was no horrible (1) _____.

The second room had a bed, table and chairs. I visited him every day and talked to him. He loved reading and talking about books. But sometimes it was (2) _____ for him. At first, one or two people in the hospital laughed at Merrick because he was (3) _____ Sometimes they brought their friends to look at him. One day a new nurse came to the hospital, and nobody told her about Merrick. She took his food to his room and opened the door. Then she saw him. She (4) _____, (5) _____ the food on the floor, and ran out of the room.

"People don't like looking at me. I know that, Dr Treves," he said. "They usually (6) _____ or scream." "Well, I don't want nurses to laugh at you, Joseph," I said angrily. "I want them to help you." "Thank you, doctor," he said, in his (7) _____ slow voice. "But it's not important. Everyone laughs at me. I understand that."

I looked at him (8) _____. In his one good hand, left hand, he had the little picture of his mother. He looked at the picture for a minute, and then put it by a flower on the table. A (9) _____ ran out of his eye and down the skin of his (10) _____, ugly face.
