

Guy Fawkes/ Bonfire or FIREWORKS Night

- It's a serious affair for the British

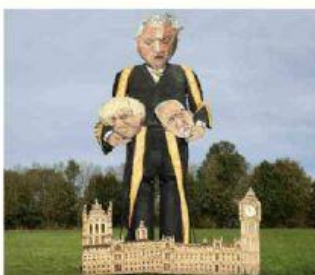

Until 1859 it was compulsory by Royal Decree to celebrate this event in every town in the land!

The celebration marks the failed attempt on 5th November in 1605 to blow up England's Houses of Parliament by a group of Catholics. The Gunpowder Plot aimed to replace the Protestant King James I with a Catholic queen. The 36 barrels of an estimated 2,500kg of gunpowder being guarded by the ill-fated Guy Fawkes would, if successful have significantly changed the face of London as we know it causing chaos and devastation over a near 500m radius.

Nowadays we see a more secular enjoyment of this historical occasion with some considering it the perfect reason for an official national holiday. Due to clear safety concerns recent years have seen less privately held firework and bonfire events in preference to larger official town displays. These are often professionally managed by the local fire brigade or military personnel.

Giant bonfires are typically topped with an effigy of Guy Fawkes. In the days leading up to 5th November children would make guys like scarecrows from old clothes and ask "Penny for the Guy?". Now effigies are often made of other noteworthy modern personalities which are publicly paraded to raise funds for their communal bonfire and firework events. In the ongoing effort to impress, some effigy choices have, perhaps unsurprisingly been contentious. Previous politicians and notorious celebrity effigies with the honour of being burnt include: Boris Johnson, Jeremy Corbyn, John Bercow, Donald Trump, Vladimir Putin, Saddam Hussein, Osama bin Laden, Harvey Weinstein and Wayne Rooney.

Odd One Out:

(identify the word in each line that doesn't belong)

- 1) Donald Trump, Wayne Rooney, Saddam Hussein, Clothes, Boris Johnson
- 2) Fire Brigade, Military, Houses of Parliament, Politics, Royalty
- 3) King, London, Houses of Parliament, England, Town
- 4) Gunpowder, Fireworks, 1605, Effigy, Bonfire, Blow-up
- 5) 500m, Boris Johnson, 36 Barrels, 2500kg
- 6) Plot, Conspiracy, Catholic, Penny, Protestant
- 7) 1859, 5th November, 1605, Scarecrow
- 8) Event, Catholic, Display, Holiday, Parade, Celebration, Milestone

Category Connect:

(draw a line)

- Guy Fawkes
- Dates
- Occasions
- Places
- Celebrities
- In Flames
- Measures
- Professions