

Thailand's Prawn Industry

These men are chattel _____⁽¹⁾, trapped miles out at sea catching the fish that feed Thailand's prawn-farming _____⁽²⁾.

Without them, the industry would collapse. Many of the prawns we eat in the West come from CP Foods' prawn _____⁽³⁾, and some of their feed contains "trash fish". This trash fish is the inedible and infant fish normally thrown away in the West. It's sorted from the rest of the

_____⁽⁴⁾ and loaded onto large cargo ships which ferry it back to _____⁽⁵⁾. It is turned into fish meal and becomes part of the fish

_____⁽⁶⁾ to feed the prawns which CP Foods supply to manufacturers and

_____⁽⁷⁾ all over the world. [Bob Miller]

"Just about every retailer in the UK one way or another buys material from CP." Thai-owned CP Foods are the largest prawn farmers on the _____⁽⁸⁾. They supply most of the leading supermarkets, including Tesco, Walmart,

Morrisons, COOP and Iceland with frozen prawns and ready-made meals. These products come at a

_____⁽⁹⁾ cost for the _____⁽¹⁰⁾, but at a high price for those at sea.
