PRACTICE

☺ Ex 1: Fill in the gaps of the following text with Infinitives or Gerunds.

According to a new study, _____ (watch) violent TV shows makes it difficult _____ (recall) brand names or commercial messages. Violence creates anger, and instead of _____ (hear) the commercials, viewers are attempting _____ (calm) themselves down after violent scenes. The results: _____ (sponsor) violent programs may not be profitable for advertisers.

This conclusion is good news for the parents, teachers and lawmakers who are struggling _____ (limit) the amount of violence on U.S. television. They had a small victory in 1997, when lawmakers and the television industry designed a TV ratings system. Unfortunately, Congress did not ask parents _____ (participate) in creating the system, and the industry does not invite parents _____ (preview) shows before it assigns ratings. As a result, parents are still guessing about the content of the shows their kids watch.

Why are we worrying about _____ (reduce) television violence? The numbers tell the story: A typical child will see 8,000 murders and 100,000 acts of violence between the ages of three and twelve. It's impossible _____ (believe) that this input won't affect young children. In fact, researchers have noted three possible effects of viewing this much violence:

1. Children may become less sensitive to other people's suffering.
2. They may also become fearful of _____ (interact) with other people.
3. They may be more likely _____ (behave) in a way that's harmful to others.

Studies show that a huge majority of people want commercial TV _____ (produce) more educational and informational programs. More than 75 % believe in limiting the number of hours of TV that children watch. And the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends _____ (not permit) children _____ (watch) more than one to two hours per day.

It's hard _____ (understand) why the entertainment industry resists _____ (make) changes. Parents, teachers and doctors are urging the industry _____ (develop) clearer ratings and get rid of violence in children's shows. In addition, violence seems _____ (not make) money for advertisers. Even artists are warning the industry not _____ (continue/ avoid) change.

The industry may choose not _____ (pay) attention to the public, but it will not be able to ignore Congress. Lawmakers want _____ (investigate) the way networks market violent shows to teenagers. They are also asking the industry _____ (offer) violence-free hours, when no violent content is allowed. Hopefully, parents in the United States will someday feel good about their children _____ (turn) on the family TV.
