Clara's Escape

It was a very hot day.

Clara the cow trotted down to the stream – clip clop, clip clop – then, splash!

She trotted into the clear water.

When she was cooler, she Clara fell fast asleep in the shade.

But the sun grew hotter.

It woke Clara up.

She decided to go back to the stream – clip clop, clip clop – stop!

Clara was stuck in the mud.

She lifted one hoof, but her other hooves were stuck.

“Moo!” Called Clara. “Moo-oo! Moo-oo!”

The famer heard Clara calling.

He ran out of the farmhouse, through the red barn, past the vegetable garden and down to the stream.

He tied a rope around Clara's neck.

He tugged and tugged Clara lifted one hoof, then another. She tried harder.

Her third hoof came free, and then the fourth.

Soon, she was out of the mud.

Clara and the farmer walked back to the farmyard.

It was much safer there!
