- e) Speed dating doesn't suit everybody. True / False

Dating in the 21st century is very different from how it was in the past. One reason for this is that people simply don't have the time to meet other people in the way they did before. In our modern, hectic world people need to do everything in a hurry, and that includes dating. The idea of speed dating started in the USA in the late 1990s and soon became popular around the world. The idea is quite simple. People meet at a location such as a bar or cafe and register as they come in. The women are usually seated at individual tables while the men are moved around the room. Each "date" lasts for about five minutes. During this time, the two people have a short conversation with the aim of finding out as much as possible about each other. After five minutes, the man stands up and moves on to the next table where they sit and talk to the women there. This continues until the men have sat at all the women's tables. So, unlike online dating, people get to see each other as well as talk. As everyone is there with the same purpose – to find a date – nobody needs to feel embarrassed. Of course, speed dating probably isn't very suitable for someone who is shy.
