

Dolphins live in water, but they are mammals, so they need to breathe air. They do this through a [] near the top of their heads. They can hear extremely well from the ear [] on the sides of their heads. Dolphins haven't got limbs, but they have got []. The top one keeps them stable, and the bottom ones steer them in the right direction. The up-and-down motion of their [] makes them move through the water.

