

Name: _____

Daniel in the Lions' Den

Label the pictures using numbers 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 to sequence them in their correct order of events.

Daniel was thrown into the lions' pit.

A cartoon illustration of Daniel sitting in a dark, underground den with several lions. He is wearing a brown robe and a blue sash.

The governors were jealous of Daniel and tried to find fault in him, but they found nothing wrong.

A cartoon illustration of three governors in colorful robes (red, orange, and purple) standing and talking to Daniel, who is holding a scroll.

This was the new law.

A cartoon illustration of the king, wearing a crown and a red and white robe, holding a scroll. The scroll contains the text: "From this day forth, no man, woman or child is to go to any god or man except Daniel, the great King. If anyone disobeys this law, they will be thrown into a den of lions. This is by order of King Darius." The background is a blue wall with a pattern of yellow lions.

The king was so impressed with Daniel that he decided to put him in charge of the whole kingdom.

A cartoon illustration of the king, wearing a crown and a purple robe, standing and talking to Daniel, who is holding a scroll.

He appointed governors to help rule over his kingdom. He put Daniel in charge of the governors.

A cartoon illustration of Daniel, wearing a brown robe and a blue sash, standing and talking to three governors in colorful robes (red, orange, and purple) who are standing in front of a golden throne.