Big Bend National Park in the southwest of Texas is one of the most majestic desert areas in the United States. It is part of the Chihuahua, which is one of the largest deserts in North America and stretches over both America and Mexico.

Big Bend Park is home to mountains, rivers, basins, valleys, as well as many plants and animals. It is not as popular of a national park as some others. This may be because it takes an extremely long time to get there. Big Bend National Park is hundreds of miles from the nearest legitimate town or airport. When people go there, they need to make sure that their cars have plenty of gas. There is a large risk of running out.

When visitors get to the park, they are usually happy that they drove all the way. The park is 1,252 square miles of desert beauty. There are beautiful cactus blooms as well as glorious sunsets. The hiking trails are magnificent. Visitors can stay in a lodge that is run by the park or camp with their own equipment. However, visitors should be careful. Even though the park is incredibly hot during the day, the lack of moisture in the air makes the heat dissipate at night. The nights at Big Bend are surprisingly cold. It's important to bring a warm sleeping bag.

Question 31: Which title best summarizes the main idea of the passage?

A. A place of Desert Flowers B. Cactus Blooms at Big Bend

C. A national park to be visited D. A desert that is cold at night

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Advertising promotes the recognition of a brand, persuades consumers to try it, and attempts to keep them devoted to it. Perhaps the most crucial purpose of consumer advertising is brand loyalty. Manufacturers want their customers to buy from them again and again, whether they make vehicles, canned goods, or cosmetics. The quality of the product will encourage this, of course, but so, too, will have certain effect on advertising.

Market research techniques are used in advertising to discover potential customers of a product. Are they homemakers or professional people? Are they young or old? Are they city dwellers or country dwellers? Such questions have a bearing on where and when ads should be played. By studying readership breakdowns for newspapers and magazines as well as television ratings and other statistics, an advertising agency can decide on the best way of reaching potential buyers. Detailed research and marketing expertise are essential today when advertising budgets can run into thousands of millions of dollars. Advertising is a fast-paced, high-pressure industry. There is a constant need for creative ideas that will establish a personality for a product in the public's mind. Current developments in advertising increase the need for talented workers.

The classic white family — breadwinner father, nonworking mother, and two children – was the target of most advertising in the past. According to new research, just roughly 6% of American homes fulfill this stereotype. Instead, society is divided into many groups, with working mothers, single people and older people on the rise. To be most successful, advertising must identify a particular section and aim its message toward that group.

Advertising is also making use of new technologies. Computer graphics are used to grab the attention of consumers and to help them see products in a new light. The use of computer graphics in a commercial for canned goods, for instance, gave a new image to the tin can.
