THE HIGHEST CITY IN THE WORLD

The city of El Alto (a Spanish word meaning 'the high place') is the world's highest city at 4,350 m above sea level. It is Bolivia's second biggest city, after Santa Cruz de la Sierra, and has a population of around one million. The South American country also has the world's highest capital city, La Paz.

2. El Alto is in the south of the country.	T	F	OS
3. Bolivia's capital city is smaller than El Alto.	T	F	OS

- Strangely, the city of El Alto didn't even exist until 1903, when the railway passing from Lake Titicaca to La Paz arrived. It has very few historical buildings, unlike the nearby La Paz, which started life 400 years earlier.
- A. El Alto is a modern city. T F C/D

The first school opened in 1938, mainly for the children of railway workers who lived there. The city grew enormously in the 1950s when it became connected to the water pipes that came under the ground from La Paz. Until then, water had to be brought to El Alto in keroses.

- The majority of people in El Alto are not of Spanish origin, but are Aymara people, who lived in Bolivia before Europeans arrived.

DAILY RESPECT

Growing up is hard work! Many young people complain that they are not given enough help by those people who should be helping them most—adults! “I can’t understand it,” says 15-year-old Hayley Lomas. “Adults have all been teenagers at some point so they know how it feels. But instead of understanding, empathy and support is getting through this difficult time, we often get criticism.”

- 1 The text says that some teenagers think
- A adults should help them more.
 - B adults have never been teenagers.
 - C adults understand teenagers' problems.
- 2 According to the text, which sentence is true?
- A Teenagers unfairly criticise adults.
 - B Teenagers prefer to help themselves.
 - C Teenagers want to avoid their parents.

Hayley isn't alone in thinking this, but there are, of course, many adults who do want to pass on their experience and knowledge. In fact, some of them have gone so far as to set up a website and mobile phone app.

- 3 The text says that
- A teenagers set up the Daily Respect website.
 - B adults set up the Daily Respect website.
 - C adults and teenagers set up the Daily Respect website.

'It's easy!' says Gemma Tilleken, the man who started Daily Respect, the organisation that provides the app and website. 'You download the app and then you get a daily message through the app about an issue that's important for many teenagers. If you then want to find out more, there will be a link to the relevant section of our website which will give much more detail about the subject.'

- 4 The Daily Respect app
A sends you a daily email.
B sends you detailed information.
C sends you a link to a web page.

Daily Respect contacted over a thousand teens to get their ideas on which subjects to cover before they even started the site, and now ask their app and website users to email them ideas for other topics they could cover.

5. The text says that over 1,000 teenagers
- A. use the app at the moment.
 - B. helped decide what should go on the website.
 - C. emailed Daily Respect with their ideas.

"The most popular area of the site are the pages about relationships," explains Tiltons. "But problems at school including bullying are not far behind. As our data's growing faster are probably the pages about problems online – you know, cyber-bullying and abuse on sites like Facebook."

The site and messages aim not to judge young people but to provide simple, practical information to help them make good decisions and to get as much as possible from life.

"We aim to supply information so that teenagers can make their own decisions, free of other people's opinions," says Gossard. "No advice is given, just information, so we won't tell you what you should

8. The text says that most teenagers look for information about
- A. relationship problems.
B. problems online.
C. problems at school.

If you are interested in getting the daily messages, look for the free app in your usual app store. To visit the website, click on the link <http://bit.ly/20170101> – what have you got to lose?

- A go to the Daily Respect website.
B download the app to your device.
C buy the app at an app store.

A a magazine.
B a newspaper.
C the Internet.
