Accidents do not happen by chance. People over the age of 85 are twenty-two times more likely to die in an accident than youngsters aged five to nine. The risk for native Americans is four times that for Asian-Americans and twice that for white Americans or African-Americans. Males are more likely than females to be involved in accidents, in part because they are more prone to risky behavior. Alaskans are more than three times as likely as Rhode Islanders to die in an accident. Texans are twenty- one times more likely than New Jerseyites to die in a natural disaster. Among the one hundred most populous counties, Kern County, California (Bakersfield), has an accident fatality rate three times greater than Summit County, Ohio (Akron).

Accidents happens more often to poor people. Those living in poverty receive inferior medical care, are more apt to reside in houses with faulty heating and electrical systems, drive older cars with fewer safety features, and are less likely to use safety belts. People in rural areas have more accidents than city or suburban dwellers because farming is much riskier than working in a factory or office and because emergency medical services are less readily available. These two factors - low income and rural residence - may explain why the south has a higher accident rate than the north.

Question 39: Which of the following is true according to the passage?

A. Children aged five to nine face the greatest accident risk.

B. All people face an equal risk of having an accident.

C. One in every 22 people aged 85 and over will die in an accident.

The blue whale is the largest animal on Earth, possibly the largest animal in the entire history of Earth. They can be up to 33 meters (110 feet) in length, with the female being larger than the male. This is equivalent in size to about three double-decker buses. Fifty humans can stand in a blue whale's mouth and its heart is the size of a small car. Its aorta is about 23 centimeters (9 inches) in diameter. The blue whale was given its Latin name Balaenoptera musculus in 1758 by Carolus Linnaeus. Linnaeus was the father of modern taxonomy, or the naming of animals. He was also known to have a sense of humor and by naming the giant of the sea musculus (little mouse).

The blue whale can weigh over 99,800 kilograms (100 tons). Females are larger than males and can weigh as much as 150 tons. On land, any animals the size of the blue whale would be crushed by its own weight without the support of large, heavy bones. Because the blue whale's body is supported by water, the need for heavy bones doesn't exist. Most of the whale's weight comes from its blubber.

The blue whale has a long, tapering body--longer and proportionately thinner than other stockier whales. Their head is flat and U-shaped and has a prominent ridge that runs from the blowhole to the top of the upper lips. There are 60 to 90 throat grooves which allow the entire throat area to expand tremendously during feeding. This expansion allows the blue whale to take in tons of water filled with its primary source of food, very tiny shrimp-like creatures called "krill." The blue whale eats the small krill because its throat is very narrow and it can only swallow an object the size of a beach ball. Once the whale takes in the krill and water, it closes its mouth, trapping the krill inside on it tongue, which is the size of an elephant. The water is then expelled through the 300 baleen plates that hang from the whale's upper jaw. In this way, the blue whale eats up to 40 million krill a day. This is an extremely efficient system that enables the largest animal in the world to feed on some of the smallest animals in the world.
