SAVING EUROPE'S WOODLANDS

Hidden in almost every European country there are ancient and untouched forests. These forests are often rich in wildlife and are home to many endangered species. One example is a small patch of Scottish forests (31) _____ contains a variety of coniferous trees suitable for a wide range of birds and insects. (32) _____ many of the ancient peoples of Europe worshipped trees, there is little respect for them today. The World Wildlife Fund has decided to (33) _____ attention to the importance of Europe's ancient woodlands. They are asking for the remaining forests to be protected by controlling the trade in wood. In addition, governments are being asked to regenerate forests where necessary and manage them in a more nature- friendly way. At present almost a third of Western Europe is covered by trees. Unfortunately, many of these have only been planted recently. This means they cannot support such a wide range (34) _____ of plant and animal life. If we destroy ancient forests we will cause many species to become extinct. The decline of ancient forests began thousands of years ago. Yet, with the growing awareness of the value of ancient woodlands, it is hoped that those remaining will be saved .By the year 2000 the W .W. F. hopes to have set up (35) _____ forest reserves across Europe. It isn't too late to do something for our ancient trees.

If you want to make your school green, think beyond your classrooms. Here are some suggestions that are all easy and simple to follow, and can make a big difference in reducing your carbon footprint and creating a sustainable community.

One of the places where both teachers and students often spend some of their time is the library. An eco-friendly reading space is likely to create a favourable impression on library users, and bring some significant educational benefits. For example, you can install energy-saving products like fans instead of air-conditioners which consume a lot of energy. You can also use biodegradable dust cloths or old T-shirts to clean the environment. In addition, to raise public awareness, allocate a clearly visible space on the noticeboard for everyday green tips like 'Let others reuse your book'.

Sporty students may prefer to spend more time in the swimming pool than in the library. Therefore, keeping this place safe and green will also help to raise their environmental awareness. Remember that chlorinated pool water may cause red eyes and itchy skin to some people if they spend much time in the pool. An ideal alternative would be a salt-water pool, which can be naturally clean and economical. In case warm water is required, think of solar heating to save the environment as one pool with gas or electric heater may emit tons of carbon dioxide each year.

Finally, focus on the school gym, which is perhaps the most interactive and exciting place for all school staff. Think of installing low-flow taps and showers to save gallons of water per minute and energy-saving lights to cut the cost of electricity. Moreover, make sure that the airflow pathways are clear and free of mould, mildew and other allergens.
