Meng begged his mother, Mrs Ang, to let him visit the pet shop. Not wanting to disappoint Meng on his birthday, Mrs Ang gave in. In the shop, neither the playful kittens nor the sleeping hamster attracted Meng's attention.

Then, his face lit it when he saw a white rabbit.

"Mum, look at its lovely fur. May I buy it?" asked Meng, pointing at the rabbit. It seemed to have heard Meng's words as it turned to look at him.

"If your rabbit falls ill, you will need to look after it. Years later, It might not be active and active and attractive anymore. Are you prepared for these challenges?" Mrs Ang asked with a serious expression.

"I'm ready for them", Meng replied confidently. Convinces, Mrs Ang took out her purse.

However, Meng insisted on paying for his own pet. He would save enough money and return the full cost of the rabbit to Mrs Ang.

Mrs Ang told Meng to accept the rabbit as a birthday present form her. Thus, Meng decided to save up for a rabbit cage instead. Just then, the shopkeeper told them that the rabbit had been limping after a fight with another rabbit. Mrs Ang and Meng were astonished as the rabbit did not seem to be aggressive.

“It’s okay. I know how it feels to walk with a limp,” Meng chirped. Upon hearing that, the shopkeeper knew the rabbit would be in good hands. He did not notice Meng limping slightly as he walked away with his rabbit happily.
