Reading

- 1 Ben Barton was a successful businessman in Aspen, Colorado, in the USA. In 1987 he married Gloria Heller. One day in 1994 Gloria called her friend Detective Jim Steele to tell him that Ben had disappeared. One month later, Detective Steele found Ben's body in the forest near Aspen. Ben had been poisoned.
- 2 Although Detective Steele and Gloria were friends, he soon began to suspect her of the murder. Instead of going to Ben's funeral, Gloria ran away. Detective Steele thought that this was a strange way for her to behave. Six years later, she was found living in another town with a man named Carl Thatcher. Detective Steele wanted to put her on trial for murder, but he had only one piece of evidence against her. A shopkeeper in Aspen had sold Gloria some rat poison two weeks before Ben's death. The most important thing was for Detective Steele to find a motive for the murder.
- 3 Detective Steele decided to interview Carl Thatcher. Carl was polite at first but became tired and angry after a few hours. Finally, he confessed. He told Detective Steele that he and Gloria had been having an affair while Ben was still alive. Carl and Gloria decided to murder Ben and get married. One evening in 1994, Gloria cooked a meal for Ben and poisoned him. Then Carl helped her to hide Ben's body in the forest. Six years after Ben Barton's death, Gloria Heller and Carl Thatcher were found guilty of murder and sentenced to fifteen years in prison thanks to Detective Steele's investigation.

A GOOD LAWYER

Finding evidence is an important part of police work. However finding evidence doesn't always mean a criminal will be convicted. Proving that a person is guilty or innocent of a crime is the job of lawyers. One of the most famous lawyers of all time was Clarence Darrow. Darrow was very famous in America around the start of the twentieth century. He often defended people who were thought to be guilty and took on many unpopular cases. In particular, he defended poor people who usually would not be able to afford a good lawyer. During trials, he was a great speaker and argued very well. He won many of his cases, even when the evidence was against him. A good lawyer is the most important part of a criminal's defence!
