Once there was a girl called Chris. She was born in Australia in New South Wales. Her mother was a teacher and her father was a jazz musician. Chris liked to sing with him when he played the piano. When Chris was 7, her family moved to Sydney, where she went to school. She often took part in school concerts. She acted in pantomimes, played the piano and the guitar. Soon Chris joined a group of teenager musicians and began to sing with them. She also bought costumes for their performances — black jeans, purple shirts and bright scarves. In these clothes they looked very stylish and hard to forget.

Most of us enjoy wearing T-shirts, especially in summer, and some people have a lot of them to choose from. This is because T-shirts are easy to buy and easy to look after. Some people, who don't like nighties and pyjamas, use T-shirts to sleep in. Also, because of the pictures and words on them, some people use T-shirts to tell the world what places they visited during their holidays or which is their favourite pop group.

The T-shirt began its life many centuries ago. First, people wore them under shirts or sweaters. But about a hundred years ago American sailors began to wear their T-shirts as if they were shirts. Soon Hollywood film stars made T-shirts really fashionable and after that nearly every young man wanted to have a T-shirt. But it took a few more years for the T-shirt to become popular with women too.
