

Treasure

Emma was on holiday but she was really bored. There were too many people in the hotel pool. She had no-one to play volleyball with and her parents just wanted to sit in the sun. Emma walked along the beach and sat down by a rock.

"What a boring day," she thought. Then, something hit her on the head. It was a beach ball. "Sorry," a little boy said. He picked up his ball and stood in front of her. He was only about six or seven. Emma wanted him to go away. "What do you want?" Emma asked him.

"Nothing," he said. "But you look unhappy. What's the matter?" "I'm bored", Emma said.

"We could look for treasure," the little boy said. Emma thought that it was a silly idea. "Where are your parents?" she asked.

"They're on our ship, out there by the island. I'm the son of a pirate," the boy said. Emma laughed. "There's no ship and you can't be a pirate," she said. "Pirates are only in films and stories."

The boy didn't move. "Believe me," he smiled. "I am the brave son of a brave pirate and our ship is there. You can't see it because you believe we're only in films and stories."

Emma thought the little boy was funny, and suddenly she didn't feel bored. "OK," she said, and stood up. "Let's explore the beach and look for treasure."

The boy pointed at some rocks. "Shall we begin looking there?" he whispered.

Between the rocks there were lots of pools of sea water. They were full of small sea creatures, beautiful stones and shells.

"Those stones and shells are lovely, aren't they? The little boy said. "They're a kind of treasure."

"Hmmm," Emma said. Then she saw something blue in the rock pool, too. "What's that? It's a glove, isn't it?"

"Yes," the little boy said. "Perhaps someone lost it here." He picked up the wet glove. "This is a kind of treasure as well," he said, and put it in a large bag that he carried on his shoulder.

Then they climbed over the rocks to the next pool. They could see something unusual in that one, too.

"What is it? Emma asked. "It looks like a silver fork. Can you get it for me?"

"Of course, I can," the little boy said. He pulled out the silver fork and put it in his bag, too.

Then Emma saw something else. There was an old pair of sunglasses in another rock pool. The little boy pulled his sleeve up over his elbow and took the sunglasses out of the water. "More wonderful treasure!" he laughed.

Then they arrived at the forth pool. The water there was really deep and the rocks around it hurt their knees.

"It's quite dangerous here," Emma said. "I don't want to stay here. Let's go back instead." But the little boy said, "Look! There's a ring under that black and gold fish. I can get that for you, too. It's the best kind of treasure."

"Are you sure?" Emma said. "That fish looks angry, doesn't it? And it's got really scary, big teeth. It might bite your fingers. That ugly crab might climb out and bite your toes, too.

"Don't worry! These things aren't frightening," he said. "I'm the brave son of a brave pirate. Deep water, fish with big teeth or ugly crabs are no problem for a child like me."

The little boy took the glove, fork and the old pair of sunglasses out of his bag. He put on the glove and put the old pair of sunglasses on the end of the fork. Then slowly put his hand then his elbow down into the deep water. The brave little boy soon hooked the ring out of the water with the end of the sunglasses. He gave it to Emma.

"Here you are," he said. "No problem!"

The ring was so pretty Emma couldn't speak, but when she looked up to thank the little boy, he wasn't there. She was very surprised. Where did he disappear to? Emma didn't know, but she carried the ring carefully back to the hotel to show her parents. They weren't sitting in the sun, so Emma went upstairs to their room. Emma's mother was there. She looked very worried and sad. "What's the matter, mum? Emma asked.

"I lost my beautiful gold ring when I went for a swim. I was having fun in the waves but it suddenly came off my finger. Emma opened her hand. "Is this it? she asked.

"Yes!" her mother said, "Where did you find it?"

"A pirate's son fished it out of a rock pool for me," Emma answered.

Emma looked out of the hotel window. A pirate ship was sailing away and a little boy was waving to her. And this time, Emma could see them both - the boy and the pirate ship!

Answer the questions

- 1) Why was Emma bored?
- 2) What hit her on the head?
- 3) How old was a little boy?
- 4) Who was his parents?
- 5) Where were the boy's parents?
- 6) What did children do together?
- 7) What treasures did they find?
- 8) Who lost a gold ring in the sea?
- 9) What did Emma see from the hotel window?

Read and write True(T)/ False(F)

- 1) Emma was on holiday with her friends.
- 2) Emma went to look for treasure with a little boy.
- 3) Between the rocks there were lots of pools of sea water.
- 4) They found an old mirror in the rock pool.
- 5) Then children found a silver fork.
- 6) They found a ring on the fourth pool.
- 7) Emma's friend lost her ring.
- 8) The girl saw a little boy on the beach.

Draw lines. Make sentences

- 1) There were too many peoplea little boy was waving to her
- 2) My parents are on our ship, out there.....and look for treasure
- 3) I lost my beautiful gold ring when.....in another rock pool.
- 4) There was an old pair of sunglasses.....I went for a swim
- 5) There's no ship and.....in the hotel pool.
- 6) A pirate ship was sailing away andby the island.
- 7) Let's explore the beach.....and suddenly she didn't feel bored
- 8) Emma thought the little boy was funny you can't be a pirate

Put sentences in order

- a) Emma and a brave pirate's son went to find treasure.
- b) The boy saw a gold ring in some deep water.
- c) Emma's mum felt very worried and unhappy.
- d) Emma could see the pirate ship and the pirate boy.
- e) Emma was on holiday but she felt really bored.
- f) The boy took a fork out of a rock pool.
- g) Emma gave her mum the gold ring.

Find words in the story that sound like these words

- 1) It sound like love but you wear this on your hand. _____
- 2) It sound like chip but can cross an ocean in this. _____
- 3) It sound like show but this is on the end of your foot. _____
- 4) It sound like talk but you can pick up food with it. _____
- 5) It sound like phone but this looks like a small rock. _____
- 6) It sound like gave but you can jump over this in the sea. _____

Read and write the correct word

sun glove disappeared boring funny stories waves

- 1) I was having fun in the _____
- 2) Emma wanted to thank the little boy, but he _____
- 3) He picked up the wet _____
- 4) Emma thought the little boy was _____.
- 5) They weren't sitting in the _____
- 6) What a _____ day, she thought.
- 7) Pirates are only in films and _____

Match words with pictures

toes wet look for elbow brave silver fork island explore gloves knees deep sea creatures

Complete the sentences with the word

gloves toes sea creatures deep explore wet look for elbow island knees brave silver fork

- 1) Tourists come to this _____ in summer.
- 2) We bought a _____ to eat pasta.
- 3) These _____ should keep my hands warm enough.
- 4) They always _____ a cheap hotel when they travel.
- 5) I can't feel my fingers or my _____.
- 6) The lake is very _____.
- 7) The road was _____ from the rain.
- 8) We would like to _____ the Amazon jungle.
- 9) Strange and mysterious deep-_____ like octopuses.
- 10) The _____ captain saved his ship.
- 11) My neighbour hurt his _____ when he fell.
- 12) Take your _____ off the table.

