

1. Vocabulary:

Parts of speech: verb verb verb adjective adjective adjective

Transcriptions: [mend] ['eɪmlɪs] [pə'sweɪd] [pə'tɪkjələ] [rɪ'tɜːn] [rɛstlɪs]

Translations: бесцельный беспокойный конкретный убеждать вернуться исправлять/ улучшать

	Parts of speech	Transcriptions	Translations
aimless particular persuade return restless
mend

Look, it has been _____ twice with silver bands.

Sherlock Holmes did not like _____ physical exercise.

It's obvious that he likes this _____ pipe very much.

One spring day I _____ him to go for a walk with me in the park.

It was almost 5 pm when we _____ to Baker Street.

He was a very _____ gentleman.

2. Listen to the audio and put the paragraphs in the correct order:

Sherlock Holmes did not like aimless physical exercise, but one spring day I persuaded him to go for a walk with me in the park. We walked for two hours, and it was almost five when we returned to Baker Street.
'You see,' Holmes said to me, 'I needed a case, and now I have lost this one because we went for a walk in the park.'
'I beg your pardon, sir,' said our page-boy, as we entered, 'there was a man waiting for you. He was a very restless gentleman. He walked all around the room saying, "Isn't Mr Holmes going to return?" Finally he left.'
'How do you know that he likes it very much?' I asked.
'Hullo! That's not your pipe on the table. Well, that man must have a very big problem because he left his pipe. It is obvious that he likes this particular pipe very much.'

'I beg your pardon,' said the man, 'I should have knocked, but I am very upset, and I need help.'
The man then took off his hat, and sat down on a chair.
Just then, as Holmes was talking, we heard someone walking up the stairs, and then a man walked into the room without knocking.
'My dear Mr Grant Munro...' began Holmes.
Our visitor jumped from his chair. 'What!' he cried. 'You know my name?'
'Well,' explained Holmes, 'I think this pipe costs around seven-and-sixpence. Now. look it has been mended twice with silver bands that probably cost more than the pipe itself. So, this man must like his pipe very much if he prefers to mend it instead of buying a new one with the same money.'

3. Put the names next to their words:

Sherlock	Sherlock	Sherlock	Sherlock	Watson	Page-boy	Munro	Munro	Munro
----------	----------	----------	----------	--------	----------	-------	-------	-------

Isn't Mr Holmes going to return?
'You see, I needed a case, and now I have lost this one because we went for a walk in the park.'
'Hullo! That's not your pipe on the table. Well, that man must have a very big problem because he left his pipe. It is obvious that he likes this particular pipe very much.'
'How do you know that he likes it very much?'
'Well, I think this pipe costs around seven-and-sixpence. Now, look, it has been mended twice with silver bands that probably cost more than the pipe itself. So, this man must like his pipe very much if he prefers to mend it instead of buying a new one with the same money.'
'I beg your pardon, I should have knocked, but I am very upset, and I need help.'
'My dear Mr Grant Munro... '
'What! You know my name?'
'I beg your pardon, sir, there was a man waiting for you. He was a very restless gentleman. He walked all around the room saying, "Isn't Mr Holmes going to return?" Finally he left.'

4. Read:

Part one

Sherlock Holmes did not like aimless physical exercise, but one spring day I persuaded him to go for a walk with me in the park. We walked for two hours, and it was almost five when we returned to Baker Street.

'I beg your pardon, sir,' said our page-boy, as we entered, 'there was a man waiting for you. He was a very restless gentleman. He walked all around the room saying, "Isn't Mr Holmes going to return?" Finally he left.'

'You see,' Holmes said to me, 'I needed a case, and now I have lost this one because we went for a walk in the park.'

'Hullo! That's not your pipe on the table. Well, that man must have a very big problem because he left his pipe. It is obvious that he likes this particular pipe very much.'

'How do you know that he likes it very much?' I asked.

'Well,' explained Holmes, 'I think this pipe costs around seven-and-sixpence. Now, look it has been mended twice with silver bands that probably cost more than the pipe itself. So, this man must like his pipe very much if he prefers to mend it instead of buying a new one with the same money.'

Just then, as Holmes was talking, we heard someone walking up the stairs, and then a man walked into the room without knocking.

'I beg your pardon,' said the man, 'I should have knocked, but I am very upset, and I need help.'

The man then took off his hat, and sat down on a chair.

'My dear Mr Grant Munro...' began Holmes.

Our visitor jumped from his chair. 'What!' he cried. 'You know my name?'

5. Answer the questions:

1. What time did they go for a walk?
2. What did the page-boy say to them?
3. Did Sherlock Holmes like their walk?
4. What did Sherlock Holmes understand when he saw a pipe?
5. How did Sherlock Holmes know that the gentleman liked his pipe very much?
6. Describe the moment when the man came into the room.
7. How do you think Sherlock Holmes knew the gentleman's name?