Over 95 percent of all species that have ever existed have gone extinct, according to estimates. What factors contribute to extinction? A species may die if it is no longer suited to its new habitat. The actual reasons of a species' extinction differ from one setting to the next. Rapid ecological change can make a species' surroundings unfriendly. Temperatures may change, for example, and a species may be unable to adapt. Environmental changes may have an impact on food supplies, causing problems for a species that relies on them. Other species may become better adapted to a given habitat, resulting in competition and, ultimately, extinction.

Extinction has happened throughout Earth's history, according to the fossil record. Recent research has also revealed that numerous species have gone extinct at the same time in the past, a phenomenon known as a mass extinction. The demise of dinosaurs and many other forms of life 65 million years ago is one of the most well-known examples of mass extinction. Perhaps the largest mass extinction was the one that occurred 225 million years ago, when approximately 95 percent of all species died. Mass extinction can be caused by a relatively rapid change in the environment and can be worsened by the close interrelationship of many species. If, for example, something were to happen to destroy much of the plankton in the oceans, then the oxygen content of Earth would drop, affecting even organisms not living in the oceans. Such a change would probably lead to a mass extinction.

One interesting, and controversial, finding is that extinctions during the past 250 million years have tended to be more intensive every 26 million years. This periodic extinction might be due to intersection of the Earth's orbit with a cloud of comets, but this theory is purely speculative. Some researchers have also speculated that extinction may often be random. That is, certain species may be eliminated and others may survive for no particular reason. A species' survival may have nothing to do with its ability or inability to adapt. If so, some of evolutionary history may reflect a sequence of essentially random events.

Question 32. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in paragraph 1 as resulting from rapid ecological change?

- A. Availability of food sources B. Temperature changes

C. Introduction of new species

D. Competition among species

Question 33. According to paragraph 2, evidence from fossil fuels suggests that _____.

- A. extinction of species has occurred from time to time throughout Earth's history
- B. dinosaurs became extinct much earlier than scientists originally believed
- C. extinction on Earth have generally been massive
- D. there has been only one mass extinction in Earth's history

Question 34. The word "ultimately" in paragraph 1 is closest in meaning to

- A. exceptionally
- B. dramatically
- C. unfortunately
- D. eventually

Question 35. In paragraph 3, the author makes which of the following statements about a species survival?

- A. It reflects the interrelationship of many species.
- B. It is associated with astronomical conditions.
- C. It doesn't vary greatly from species to species.
- D. It may depend on random events.

Question 36. The word "demise" in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. recovery
- B. survival
- C. death
- D. change

Question 37. According to the passage, it is believed that the largest extinction of a species occurred _____.

- A. 26 million years ago
- B. 250 million years ago
- C. 225 million years ago
- D. 65 million years ago

Question 38. What does the author say in paragraph 1 regarding most species in Earth's history?

- A. They have been able to adapt to ecological changes.
- B. They have caused rapid changes in the environment.
- C. They have remained basically unchanged from their original forms.
- D. They are no longer in existence.

Question 39. The word "others" refer to _____

- A. Reasons
- B. scientists
- C. species
- D. random events

Read and mark the letter A, B, C or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions

An air pollutant is a substance that people add to the atmosphere, either directly or indirectly, in sufficient amounts to affect humans, animals, flora, or materials adversely. Air pollution need a broad definition that allows for constant change. Air pollutants were confined to chemicals that could be seen or smelled when the first air pollution rules were enacted in England in the fourteenth century, a long cry from the wide list of dangerous substances known today. The list of air contaminants has become longer as technology has advanced and awareness of the health effects of numerous substances has grown. Under some circumstances, even water vapor might be designated an air pollution in the future.

Many of the more important air pollutants, such as sulfur oxides, carbon monoxide, and nitrogen oxides, are found in nature. As the Earth developed, the concentration of these pollutants was altered by various chemical reactions; they became components in biogeochemical cycles. These serve as an air purification scheme by allowing the compounds to move from the air to the water or soil. On a global basis, nature's output of these compounds dwarfs that resulting from human activities.

However, human production usually occurs in a localized area, such as a city. In such a region, human output may be dominant and may temporarily overload the natural purification scheme of the cycles. The result is an increased concentration of noxious chemicals in the air. The concentrations at which the adverse effects appear will be greater than the concentrations that the pollutants would have in the absence of human activities. The actual concentration need not be large for a substance to be a pollutant; in fact, the numerical value tells us little until we know how much of an increase this represents over the concentration that would occur naturally in the area.

Question 40. What does the passage mainly discuss?

- A. The economic impact of air pollution. B. What constitutes an air pollutant.
C. How much harm air pollutants can cause. D. The effects of compounds added to the atmosphere.

Question 41. The word "adversely" in the first paragraph is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. negatively B. quickly C. admittedly D. considerably

Question 42. It can be inferred from the first paragraph that _____.

- A. water vapor is an air pollutant in localized areas
B. most air pollutants today can be seen or smelled
C. the definition of air pollution will continue to change
D. a substance becomes an air pollutant only in cities

Question 33. The word "These" in the second paragraph is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. The various chemical reactions B. The pollutants from the developing Earth
C. The compounds moved to the water or soil D. The components in biogeochemical cycles
