Irving

Irving was a snail. He was growing too big for his little shell. One morning he decided to find a new home.

On the street, Irving saw a small can. He climbed inside. "This house is too big!" he thought.

The next day, Irving found a teacup. "This home looks perfect," he thought. But the teacup had a big crack. "If it rains, I will get wet."

On the third day, Irving saw a store. "I can't find a home. But maybe I can buy one," he thought. Irving crossed the street. "Do you sell homes?" he asked the store owner.

The store owner smiled. "We sell shells," he said.
