My parents and I stayed at the seaside with some friends. On Saturday evening there was an open-air film show on the beach which my parents wanted to go to. I wasn't exactly keen on going with them at first in order to watch some old films. 'Cinema Classics', the leaflet said. In the end, though, I gave it a go. It was surprisingly good. I especially enjoyed one black-and-white science fiction film called Metropolis.

Another surprise was that there were a lot more young people in the audience than I had expected.

Last weekend we had some guests from Canada. My dad's friend, Tomek, has been living there for many years and he's visiting Poland at the moment, along with his wife and their daughter, Janine. They don't speak much Polish, so we all had to communicate in English, which was OK for me. Janine is medium height and slim with dark hair and she's really friendly. We had such a good time shopping on Saturday. They invited us to visit them in Canada next summer. I can't wait!

My family often goes hiking in the mountains, so it's no surprise that we went last weekend. We chose a long hiking route for Saturday. But before we left the mountain resort where we were staying, it started raining really heavily.

We walked round the town a bit, looked at the souvenirs, hoping the weather might get better. But it didn't, so, just before midday, we drove back home, feeling awfully disappointed.

Every year there is a festival in my town which features a huge street market selling all sorts of goods, many of them hand-made. At the same time, there are sales on in the local shopping mall, so my friends and I always look forward to this time of the year. I'd saved most of my pocket money for the occasion! On Friday my friends and I bought some clothes at the mall, but we spent the whole Saturday and most of the Sunday at the street market near the main square. I bought some old-fashioned decorations for my room, which I think are lovely.
