

Match the beginnings with the endings:

TYPES OF PUNISHMENT

Offenders may be subject to	to teach offenders how to substitute lawful behaviour for unlawful actions.
Correctional programs attempt	were required as compensation for death, personal injury, and theft.
In ancient times, societies widely accepted	fines, restitution, and community service.
During the early Middle Ages payments of “blood money”	imposed on an offender and paid to the court.
There are three chief types of compensation:	the law of equal retaliation (known as lex talionis)
A fine is a monetary penalty	to correct unlawful behaviour
Judges may impose restitution	fines, the corporal punishment, or incarceration
Contemporary criminal punishment seeks	that house individuals convicted of more serious crimes, known as felonies.
Prisons are state or federally operated facilities	as capital punishment.
Execution of an offender is known	as probation (supervised release to the community) or incarceration.