

A father learnt a lesson from his son

There lived a carpenter in a village. His aged father and his son Ramu lived with him. The carpenter treated his father without any respect.

One day the old man was eating, the earthen plate slipped down from his hands and broke to pieces.

The carpenter was very angry. He beat his father. Ramu was sad. Next morning Ramu took his father's tools and made a wooden plate.

His father saw him “what are you making Ramu?” asked the carpenter. I made a plate for you. In your old age to give you that will not break easily like earthen plate.

The carpenter learnt the lesson of his life. He felt ashamed. From that day he treated his father with kindness and respect.

Moral of the Story:- Respect the elders.
