

Novak Djokovic and COVID-19 vaccine

Novak Djokovic is a Serbian tennis star, who's _____ ranked world No. 1 in _____ singles tennis; many _____ him to be one of the greatest tennis players _____ all time.

_____ refusal to _____ vaccinated against COVID-19 led _____ his deportation from Australia before his Australian Open title defense. He was hoping to get his 21st grand slam title there; instead, Rafael Nadal accomplished it _____ a marathon five-set match with Daniil Medvedev. For the first time this season, Djokovic competed in the Dubai Championship, where there is no requirement _____ vaccination. The rest of his matches are unclear.

During an interview with _____ state TV, Djokovic said he accepted that no vaccination might stop him from playing tennis in many tournaments this season. However, he said that he was open to getting vaccinated eventually.

Elizabeth Holmes scandal

Elizabeth Holmes is the founder of the failed blood-testing company Theranos. She is facing decades in prison; a court _____ her guilty of conspiring to rob her investors of hundreds of millions of dollars.

Holmes was the _____ youngest self-made billionaire, and the media _____ described her as the next Steve Jobs. Her revolutionary medical testing method was easier, quicker, and cheaper because it _____ only a little bit of blood from a _____ finger that could be tested for lots of diseases.

However, people found the testing _____ more blood, and some people _____ had incorrect test results. Holmes had attracted a lot of investors, and she'd received medical and financial support.

In 2015, journalists first _____ the reliability of the tests, and investors found Theranos maybe _____ something _____. Holmes is now a convicted felon, and she's guilty of four conspiracy and fraud charges.