

Good and Well

Good is an adjective. It modifies a noun.
Good should never be used as an adverb (modifying a verb).

The spring flowers smell good.

Well is an adverb. It modifies a verb (telling "how").

Hans did well on his test.

Hans did good on his test.

Well may be used as an adjective, like good, to indicate good health or satisfactory conditions.

All is good in our city.

All is well in our city.

Complete each sentence with 'good' or 'well'.

1. If you work _____, you will get _____ grades.
2. How _____ do you know the teacher?
3. You're such a _____ helper.
4. She is such a _____ that all her friends want to study with her.
5. I like to go to a _____ restaurant on her birthday.
6. How _____ do you swim?
7. That was a _____ puppet show.
8. The circus dogs did very _____ act.
9. The policeman did a very _____ job at finding the thief.
10. He played very _____ toda