LISTENING: Listen and fill in the spaces.

A new United Nations report has found that healthcare _____ world are becoming more unequal. The annual World Health Report, launched on October 14th by the World Health Organization (WHO), found that the healthcare gap between rich and poor people _____ it was thirty years ago. _____ in the same city experience enormous differences in the quality of medical care _____. The WHO said in its report: "In far too many cases, people who are well-off and generally healthier have _____ the best care, while the poor are _____ themselves." Perhaps the saddest conclusion of the report is that health care today is frequently treated as something which hospitals _____.

The WHO recommends a return _____ "primary health care" system that many countries developed in the 1970s. Back then, the sick _____ doctor and get the treatment they needed. The report says healthcare no longer focuses on poorer members of society: "Health _____ delivered according to a model that concentrates on diseases, high technology, and specialist care," it stated. WHO Director-General Dr. Margaret Chan said: "Viewed _____, primary health care looks more and more _____ to get health development back on track." She added: "We are, in effect, encouraging countries to go _____." More than 100 million people are pushed below the _____ year because they cannot afford healthcare.

LIVEWORKSHEETS