Section 4. Comprehension. (20m)
Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

That day, Henry went home in a huff because he had spent the afternoon at his school's Sports Day alone while the rest of his classmates had one of their parents take the day off to cheer them on in their sports events.

"Why can't she have time for me? Why is she always not around?" thought Henry. His mother was a secretary for a shipping company and she often worked way past the time to go home, returning only at the witching hour or even later. She did not have time to go through his homework with him, she did not have time to watch television programmes with him, she did not have time to visit the zoo with him...she did not have time to do anything with him at all.

On Saturdays, Henry's mother would leave for neighbouring Johor Bahru to help his grandfather out at his herbal medicine shop and only come back on Sundays, at, of course, the witching hour. Any papers and forms that required her signature would have to be left on the table. By the next day, before leaving for school, the papers would have to be left on the table. By the next day, before leaving for school, the papers would have been signed and left at the exact same spot. His father was stationed overseas and could only come home once a year, usually during the Chinese New Year. He understood his father's absence, as he had been in Dubai for as long as he could remember, but it was difficult to understand his mother's situation. She was in Singapore, but he could not see or touch her. It was a case of being so near, yet so far away.

In the empty house, Henry sat alone on the sofa, thinking about what he could do to make himself feel better. After a long time, an idea struck him. He would go find his mother! It was a brilliant idea. All Henry had to do was to take the train to Kallang station, cross the junction, and walk past the row of shophouses before turning left to walk up the first flight of stairs to the second-storey office. It was based on memory and he was very confident that he would be able to get to his destination and spring a surprise on her. With a wide beam plastered on his face, he immediately changed out of his uniform.
