William lives in a flat in a tall building in the city centre. Every summer, he goes to visit his uncle, Richard, who lives on a farm in the south of the city. Uncle Richard is a great farmer, William likes helping his uncle feed the cows and other animals there. And what he loves the most is playing with the black and white sheepdog. Its name is Pirate and William thinks that it's the smartest dog in the world.

Early one-morning last summer, Uncle Richard came into the kitchen. 'The sheep in the field aren't there now!' he said. 'I must find them. Come and help me, William!'. William jumped up and followed him outside. They climbed up onto the big old green tractor. Pirate jumped up into the back.

Uncle Richard drove the tractor up the hill. Suddenly, Pirate got very excited. Uncle Richard stopped the engine and shouted: 'Go, Pirate! Find the sheep!'. Pirate jumped down and ran behind some big trees. Just a few minutes later, we saw him again. The clever dog ran around the sheep to make them come back down into the field.

William whistled loudly and called: 'Well done, Pirate! You're brilliant!'

Pirate worked very hard that day. 'He's tired', Uncle Richard whispered to William. 'He ran a long way today'. Then Uncle Richard gave Pirate some sausages for dinner. Pirate wasn't too tired and he enjoyed his favourite food that evening.
