Lost and found

In 2009, Andrew Cheatle and his friend were playing with Andrew's dog on a beach when Andrew dropped his phone. The phone wasn't <sup>1</sup> _____ silent, so Andrew rang it from his friend's phone, but he couldn't hear <sup>2</sup> _____ at all. He looked everywhere, but he eventually accepted that the phone was lost for ever. Then, a week later, his girlfriend's phone started ringing. When she picked it <sup>3</sup> _____, she noticed it was Andrew's number that was calling. Andrew was with her, so they realised that <sup>4</sup> _____ had found Andrew's phone. She asked the caller who he <sup>5</sup> _____. He told <sup>6</sup> _____ that he was a fisherman and his name was Glen. He explained that he had been fishing <sup>7</sup> _____ morning and had caught a big fish. When he had taken the fish to market, he had found a phone inside it. Yes, Andrew's phone had <sup>8</sup> _____ eaten by a fish! Glen said he'd taken the SIM card out, put it into a dry phone and phoned the saved numbers. He was very pleased to get <sup>9</sup> _____ to Andrew's girlfriend. When Andrew got his phone back the next day, it wasn't working, but he <sup>10</sup> _____ it mended and started using it again. The biggest problem was getting rid of the fishy smell!
