Read about the life cycle of frogs and complete the diagram given below.

Frogs are amphibians, they can live both on land and in water. The female frog lay eggs in masses in the water. The eggs hatch into small fish – like creatures called tadpoles. These tadpoles breathe through gills and have a tail. The tadpoles spend time swimming in the water, eating and growing. Their body becomes longer and they began to grow hind legs. After this, the fore legs begin to appear. At this stage, after two or four months, the froglets look almost complete but they still have small tails. The froglets are also able to breathe through their lungs. Soon the tails disappear and the froglets become fully formed adults called frogs.
