THE RED DOLPHIN

In the center of the Amazon jungle lived an indigenous community that worshiped water for its benefits and liked to tell stories about the inhabitants of the water. The story they liked to tell the most was that of the red dolphin. The story tells about a red dolphin that lived in the depths of the Amazon River and came out of the depths to steal women.

When there was a full moon, the community celebrated the growth of the river and had a big party with traditional dances and lots of food and invited the nearby communities. The red dolphin emerged at midnight from the depths transformed into a man. He was tall, dark, black hair, big eyes and thin. But to transform himself, the man used the fish as feet, the leaves of the trees as a loincloth and the stingray as hair.

When it was 3:00 am, the red dolphin disappeared with the youngest and most beautiful woman at the party and made her his wife.
