

Read the story. Complete it with the pictures.

Once upon a time in Antarctica lived Flippy, a little penguin. One day he came to his father.

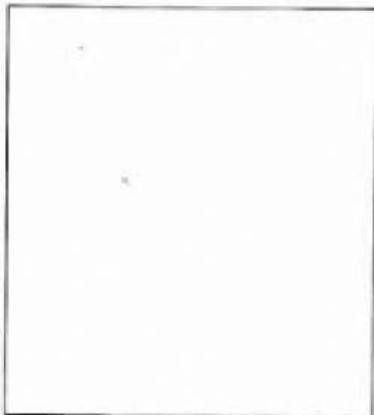

"Dad, can I go swimming in the sea alone today?" he asked.

"But you're very little!" his dad said.

"I'm little but I can swim and dive very well," Flippy said.

"OK", his dad said.

"Hurray!" Flippy cried loudly and ran to the sea.

He ran very fast, so soon he was near the sea. He wanted to jump into the water but suddenly he saw something black and white under the water. He looked carefully. It was another little penguin!

"Who are you?" asked Flippy. The penguin didn't answer.

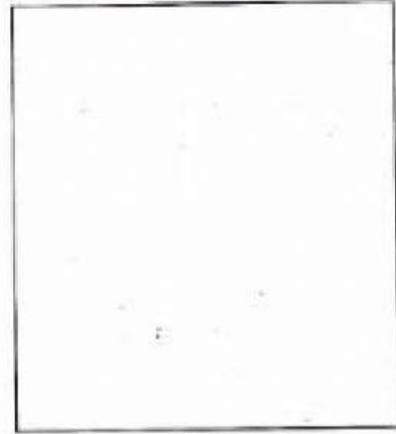

"Go away!" said Flippy angrily and stamped his feet. The penguin under the water stamped his feet, too. Flippy didn't like it at all. He turned round and wanted to go away.

But then he had an idea.
"I should talk quietly to him," he thought.

He slowly came up to the water again and looked. The penguin was there.

"Hello! I'm glad to see you," said Flippy and smiled. The penguin under the water smiled happily, too.

Put the sentences in the correct order.

- Flippy stamped his feet angrily.
- He ran fast to the sea.
- 1 Flippy spoke with his father.
- He asked the penguin, "Who are you?"
- The penguin smiled back.
- He wanted to go away.
- He saw another penguin in the water.
- Flippy smiled at the penguin.