The City of Hub-Bub

Once upon a time there was a city called Hub-Bub. It was the 1___ city in the world. The people there never talked, they shouted. The noisiest person was the young prince. He was a very little boy, only eight, but he could make 2___ noise than grown-up people. His 3___ game was to climb up the ladder with cans and then knock 4___ over with a loud crash.

One day he told the king: "I want to hear the 5___ noise in the world for my birthday." The king liked the idea. "It will be 6___ to hear millions of people shout 'Happy Birthday' to my son." The day came and two billion people gathered in their public 7___ places.

They looked with 8___ at the clock. The young prince waited 9___ for the loudest noise looking at thousands of people from his balcony. But there was absolute silence. Every person kept silent to hear the others shout. Strange as it may appear the prince was happy. For the 10___ time in his life he heard the 11___ of birds and the sound of the wind in the whisper of the leaves
