Technology is changing all the time, and people must change with it. Smartphones of the future will be even thinner and lighter than they are now. Twenty years ago, mobile phones were big and heavy. People couldn't use them to take or send photos or videos. On smartphones today, people can easily click on an icon, and send photos and videos to their friends online. In the future, most people will watch TV on their smartphones. Shops won't sell family televisions, and only some people will have them in their homes. Wearable technology is the latest development. One day, we might all have small microchips in our clothes. These microchips will be connected to the internet. And we'll be able to do our food shopping using virtual reality headsets.
