Solar energy can be trapped in several ways. One of the most effective technologies is the use of solar power plants. These power plants are specifically designed to produce electricity on a larger level. Other appliances and technologies that work on solar energy are solar cookers, solar heaters, and solar cells

Solar cookers are the most revolutionary methods of cooking nowadays. Instead of using conventional fuels such as gas or wood, solar cookers work with the help of sunlight. They have a glass lid which captures and concentrates all the sun rays to produce heat and cook food. Solar cookers are eco-friendly and economical means of cooking

Solar heaters are the appliances that help in heating the water with solar energy. These devices work on the fluid-based technology. That means, either air or an anti-freezing fluid is put into the collector so that the water can be heated without any electricity.

The last and third from is solar cells. These solar cells directly convert solar light into electricity. Many calculators, wrist watches, and similar systems work with this technology. Not only that, but the electricity produced by solar panels can also be stored in rechargeable solar batteries.
