Humans rely on natural resources for survival, but not all natural resources are renewable. Therefore, it is necessary for everyone to conserve natural resources. There are several ways to do this in your own home.

1. Use less water. Taking shorter showers or turning off the faucet while brushing your teeth can cut down on water waste in your home. Only use your dishwasher or washing machine when there is a full load, and switch to energy-saving appliances if possible.
2. Turn off the lights. Turn off any lights or televisions after you leave a room. Unplug appliances like air conditioners, toasters, and coffeemakers when not in use, as they can continue to use small amounts of electricity. Additionally, LED light bulbs require far less wattage than standard bulls, so switching to this alternative lighting method can also help conserve resources.
