My foreing friends

Read the following text.

Hello! I am Rachell. I have friends from all over the world. Sometimes people don't believe me, so I have to explain them in detail so that they can trust me. I work as a hostess. I travel every day to different countries. I am so talkative and friendly, so I always meet new people wherever I go. I am Spanish, but I know English and Japanese; that's why I can communicate with many people easily. My best friend, for example, is from Italy. He is Italian. His name is James and we met on my first journey abroad. He was a little shy at the beginning, but then, we got along. I also have a friend in France. Her name is Lucia and she's French. It was difficult to communicate with her at the beginning because her English was very limited, but we found the means and I even learned a little French. I met her five years ago when I was on a flight to different parts of Europe. I have a group of friends in Colombia. They are Colombian. Their names are Lucas, Karen, and Daniela. I met them on the plane while I was working. They were scared because that was their first time flying, so I tried to calm them down and suddenly, we interchanged phone numbers. I also have a friend in Germany. His name is Alex. He is German. I met him while I was on a journey to Germany. I stayed in a hotel there, in which he was working. He was so friendly. He even showed me the city. I met him last year. Finally, I have a friend in South Korea. Her name is Jenny. She is Korean. I didn't meet her because of my job, I met her because I visited the country with my boyfriend on my last vacation five months ago. Her English was pretty good. For that reason, I could communicate very well with her. We have been talking through text messages and it's so interesting to know many things about her culture. I am so grateful that I have the ability to make friends wherever I am, otherwise, this job would have been very boring.
