Listen to the presentation and practice:

Hello teacher and classmates. Today I will talk about the Pink Dolphin of the Amazon.

The Pink Dolphin of the Amazon

The Pink Dolphin is such an endangered animal that there are only a few thousand dolphins in the Amazon rivers.

Where does it live:

The Pink Dolphin lives in lakes and rivers of Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Brasil, and Peru.

IUCN Status:

The Amazon Pink Dolphin has been an endangered animal in the IUCN list since 2018.

Why is it endangered?

The Amazon Pink Dolphin is endangered because people pollute rivers and lakes.

2 reason

The second reason are dams. People build dams to have water and electricity; this endangers the Pink Dolphin.

What can people do to save it?

We can help the Pink Dolphin by taking care of the environment and by using less electricity and water.

Which organization can I write to?

We can write to WWF (World Wildlife Fund). This organization helps endangered animals in the world.

Thank you for your attention. That is all.
