Held annually as a community celebration, Dieng festival presents various art and cultural performances, Dieng's finest product exhibition, and to top it all is the unique dreadlock kids' ritual ceremonies (or Ruwatan anak gembel/gimbal).

The Festival features Dieng's own distinct traditional art forms such as the Rodad Dance, Lengger Dance, Rampak Yakso, Warokan, Barongsai, Cakil Dance, and Wayang Kulit or Javanese leather puppet show.

As the main feature of the festival, the ceremonies of shaving of the kids' dreadlock hair are truly exceptional. While globally dreadlock hair is commonly known from Jamaica, in the highlands of Dieng, dreadlock is a mystical feature which only occurs in children. According to local belief, these kids are somehow chosen by their ancestors to hold these gifts, and that the dreadlock must not be trimmed until the children ask for it. The precious moments when these dreadlocks are shaven are celebrated in a series of ritual ceremonies known as the ruwatan anak gimbal.

The ceremonies are started with the procession of the dreadlock kids around the village. They are paraded on Javanese traditional horse drawn carriage or Dokar guarded by Manggala Yudha or royal troops and followed by various traditional art processions. Then they are taken to the Arjuna Temple in the Dieng Temple complex where the ritual of the dreadlock hair cutting will take place. Subsequently, the hair will be taken to the lake and submerged as returning of the hair to the ancestors.
