FIRST CONDITIONAL

A conditional sentence has two parts: (if clause) and (main clause).

If I pass, I'm going to have a big party!

If I don't decide soon, I'll miss the deadline.

I might fail the year if she doesn't give me more time.

Which part talks about a possible future situation and which one about the result of that situation?

If clause:

Main clause:

Read the sentences again:

1. What tenses do we use to talk about the result?

2. If the sentence starts with the if clause, what punctuation mark do we use in the middle of the clauses?

3. Create a question using the first conditional.
