

Reduced Relative Clauses

There are different ways to add information to noun phrases, without using a relative pronoun (which, who, that, etc)

The adverb namely and the phrase that is are used to add details about a noun phrase:

- ☐ This side effect of the treatment, namely weight gain, is counteracted with other drugs.
- ☐ The main cause of global warming, that is the burning of fossil fuels, is to be the focus of negotiations at the international conference.

We can also add information to a noun phrase using a participle clause beginning with an -ing, -ed or being + -ed verb form. These are often similar to defining relative clauses:

- ☐ The people living next door come from Italy. (or The people who are living next door ...)
- ☐ The weapon used in the murder has now been found. (or The weapon that was used ...)
- ☐ The prisoners being released are all women. (or The prisoners who are being released ...)

Note that -ing participle clauses correspond to defining relative clauses with an active verb, while -ed and being + -ed clauses correspond to defining relative clauses with a passive verb.

We can also use a to-infinitive clause, as in:

- ☐ Have you brought a book to read?
- ☐ My decision to resign from the company was made after a great deal of thought.
- ☐ I thought that the management's offer, to increase staff holidays, was a good one.
