The story revolves around a teen girl, Hazel Lancaster, who is_____. She can hardly remember life without cancer and has almost given up hope on her life. She then meets Augustus Waters, a cancer survivor, who reads her favourite books for her and _____. This helps her to gather strength. The two of them deal with cancer and love. I enjoy reading the novel as it was written in a terrific way. It makes us become a part of the characters and feel the same emotions. Hazel and Augustus appeal to readers through their sense of humour and their courage. But behind this courage, both of them hide _____ to protect their families. The moral values that I learnt from the story is through a quote mentioned by Augustus, "_____" which means if we want something desirable, we have to first go through the hardships.

I would definitely recommend it to anyone who believes _____ and has the courage to fight for it. Through this book I realised that cancer not just touches victims, but it also touches _____.
